The guided tour of the city of Kos and its monuments starts with the visit to Asklipieion, the ancient temple dedicated to the God of health, Asclepius.

The Asklipieion of Kos was the best and the most important “Asklipieion” of Ancient times. Situated 4km from the city centre on a hill surrounded by a forest with cypress trees, it is divided into three levels, each totally different from the other, with a magnificent view of the gulf of Kerameikos and the Middle East coasts.

After Asklipieion we visit the town center.

Walking through the small streets of the old town, we reach Freedom’s square, the central square of the city, which is surrounded by Italian-constructed buildings, such as the Museum (the Italian Palace of 1936), the Agora (the Market) and the Library. As we pass through the “Toll Gate” entrance, the central gate of the ancient city Wall, we are lead through the ancient “agora” to the square of Hippocrates’ Plane Tree, the oldest tree in Europe. The bridge, which crosses the Palm Trees Avenue, joins the square with the Medieval Castle of Neratzia, which was built by the Knights of St. John in 1478, and which dominates the port. Platanos Square is rich in monuments of all the Island’s periods of occupation. The mosque of Loggia, built in 1786, is the monument of the Turkish occupation.

Here, under the shadow of the Hippocrates Plane Tree, the journey into the history of Kos comes to a close.
